

RELIGIOUS STUDIES MINOR

The minor in religious studies is designed to provide students with the opportunity to learn about religion in cross-cultural and historical perspectives. The required courses are designed to provide a comparative perspective on world religions and to develop an appreciation of both the origins and contemporary expressions of different religions. This minor is particularly well suited for students in the humanities and social sciences as well as students in other disciplines who want to deepen their understanding of the role of religion in contemporary life.

Curriculum

Students must have a minimum of 2.00 grade point average in the required 18 hours to be eligible for a religious studies minor.
